

ONE-PAGE OVERVIEW

Every Spravato® dose starts a two-hour clock and a seven-day deadline.

Lucido runs that window in real time and hands you a finished REMS form — so the day-of compliance the FDA requires doesn't live on a clipboard and a kitchen timer.

THE DAY ON PAPER

- Vitals on clipboards, transcribed by hand — pre-dose, midpoint, pre-discharge.
- The 120-minute window on a kitchen timer at the front desk.
- REMS forms filled after hours; some slip past the seven-day window.
- “Who recorded that, and when?” — an audit trail nobody can reconstruct.

THE DAY WITH LUCIDO

- The floor runs from one live board — every room, its phase, minutes remaining.
- The clock is enforced in the database: discharge can't run before 120 minutes.
- Discharge fills the genuine Janssen REMS form — file it, mark it done.
- Every action is timestamped to a person on an append-only audit log.

Three surfaces, one source of truth.

CLINICIANS
Staff phone
Walks the session phase by phase — vitals, dosing, observations, the SAE review, discharge.

THE PATIENT
Patient phone
No app, no account. A soft countdown, breathing, and a help button that reaches staff at once.

Lucido is the cockpit, not the filing cabinet.

It captures every field the form needs as the session happens, hands you a ready-to-file record — then lets go. The session record auto-deletes after the clinic's retention window, so no permanent PHI footprint accumulates.

The compliance posture, on by default.

- HIPAA-eligible AWS, with a signed Business Associate Addendum.
- Completed records are immutable — a database trigger blocks every edit but filed status.
- Append-only audit log, seven-year retention, owner-exportable.
- Encrypted in transit (TLS) and at rest (AES-256) — DB, backups, audit.
- The 120-minute rail is enforced in Postgres, not just the screen.
- Minimal PHI — only what the form asks; no email or analytics vendor.

Where things stand — honestly.
Lucido is in active development and runs on synthetic demo data; no real patient information is in the system today. Production hardening is completed before the first clinic's real data lands. Free during development — no per-session or per-patient fees. We're looking for our first Spravato® clinics to build alongside.
